The common phrase „I never said it like that“ is not only title but also stimulus and inspiration for the various works of the exhibition. Each of the invited artists deals with the quality and creative potential of ambiguous interpretations and misunderstandings as well as the thereby-implemented processes of learning. If two individuals follow different paths of interpretation, it's not only a source of confusion but new possibilities are being revealed. In the moment of its exposure, misreading can lead to frustration, but also form the basis for new ideas and humorous situations. The aim to deal with the process of learning and reviewing is inspired by the history of the „Bristol Diving School“. As a former School for diving and dancing it has always been a place for curiosity, trial and learning. For the exhibition „Das habe ich so nie gesagt – I never said it like that“ the artists follow the steps of the former students – where mistakes are a matter of interpretation, there are no real errors and the process of failing provides the framework for new discoveries.
